

Customer meeting May 9, 2018

Present: Lars, Tom and Marc.

We had a short meeting with the customer to discuss the options to solve the problems with the wasted space in the devices main screen and the activators screen. We told Lars that we had considered a few options, but that we were not really sure what way to go. The front end team found the dropdown not really iOS like. Marc found that showing the activators on a new screen was iOS like, but it gives a lot of white space. Lars found the dropdown and the bigger cell also not a really good option. He suggested to make a pop up screen to show the activators inside the main devices screen instead of going to the new activator screen. The front end team was wondering if the ordering of activators on the server was random, but Lars said that there was predetermined order. Then Tom suggested to place the first activator on the right side of the cell, just as in a previous version. This seemed fine to Lars. So, we will try to make a pop up for the activators on tap of the cell and show the first activator on the right side of the cell.
